

above: Bryce White weighs his catch; top: Dacota McDaniel, Kade Boone, McCain Carnegie, Ryan Ivey, and Kaleb Campbell check their tackle; top right: Dacota McDaniel and Kade Boone display their prize winning fish at the Collegiate Bass Fishing competition; right: Ryan Ivey and McCain Carnegie fish for the largest bass.

bass fishing club

competition hooks results

The Bass Fishing Club spent the year giving their all on and off the water. Even in teams of two, the team still remained united as one in their efforts to catch the grandest fish. Long days away from home were made worth it by the satisfying results of each tournament, and the young men faced the challenges of the outdoors with brave faces and strong hearts. Each member was required to supply their own equipment and fishing boat, but their love for the sport ensured that expenses would not get in the way of their passion.

The team attended two major fishing tournaments hosted by Bass Pro Shops, the Collegiate Bass Championship Series and the Carhartt Bassmaster College Series, during the school year, and the fishermen were up against competitors from junior and senior colleges from all over the nation. Many of the Bass Fishing Club members will continue to compete at universities, and their insatiable desire to catch the big one will drive them to try their hardest in the future.

Sponsor Dr. Addie Boone enjoyed working with the team of young men. "The team has a lot of good guys on it, and we all enjoy going to the tournaments. It is always nice seeing them having fun and doing something they love."

by Madison VanNess